About Me

I am Timothy Carl A. Giron, an Information Technology(IT) student who strives to learn more about web developing using my skills and attained knowledge about HTML, CSS, as well as Python. My love of computers is what made me choose this course so that I can discover more information about the technology. The constant evolution of technology is what intrigued me to learn more about it while keeping up with the latest trends in the technological industry.

Objective

As a recent college graduate, I am looking for a job to enhance my skills a beginner web developer in this company as well as helping to create dynamic and user-friendly websites. With my recent years of studying web development using HTML and CSS, and a passion for staying updated with industry trends, I am eager to contribute to this company by designing and implementing innovative web solutions that meet and exceed client expectations.
